The Rev. H. D. Marr, B.A., representing the Bible Society for the Province of Alberta, addressed a goodly gathering in the Union Church. It had been announced that the address would be illustrated by lantern views, but owing to this being no electric light Mr. Marr had to make his remarks as interesting as possible to suit the little ones who were present with the hope of seeing the pictures. Two collectors for the Society were appointed.

MIXED FARMING

Is the Need of the West Says Premier
Sifton

Premier Sifton of Alberta who has been in the east lately, is reported as having told a Toronto newspaper man that mixed farming is the great need of the Canadian West. In part he said: "The Western Province will be even more prosperous when the farmers go in for mixed farming. Our demonstration trains are fast bringing this view home to the minds of the farmers with conviction."

There is an economic reason for impressing this truth on the minds of the farmers. It is this. All grain farming is speculative. If weather conditions, and all else, remained calculable from year to year, grain farming would have no evils. But one year the crops are all A No. 1; then comes a poorer year; next, an average good year; again a big year; then a failure. Under such conditions a man may be rich one year and a pauper another. But if the farmers went in for mixed farming, other crops besides grain and cattle and horses, there would be a balance of fortunes, and Western farmers would always be in a well-to-do position, with nothing to worry about."

Premier Sifton admitted that some of the discontent in the West was caused by bad farming. "But," he said, "on the whole the farmers are satisfied with the land and with the climate. Those who grouse most are the speculative farmers who want to get rich quick and fall to do so."

HAMILTON FACTORIES.

Immense Growth of Industries Under the National Policy

Hamilton, Ontario, known throughout the world as one of Canada's great industrial cities, has been celebrating its centennial. One by one, the city has magnetized new industries, until to-day, it has 354 factories and shops, representing capital invested of $58,000,000 and turning out products every year worth over $55,000,000.

A large number of United States companies have their Canadian branch plants in Hamilton, and several others have their commercial eyes turned that way. The citizens and the civic industrial officers have the knack of steering prospective manufacturers to the so-called Ambitious City, which now deserves a new nickname, having realized so many of its high ambitions. A table gives statistics of the industries of Hamilton as compiled during the latest census. The figures show that over 18,000 people are employed in the factories of Hamilton, where they earn $5,214,375. The cost of the raw material used by the 354 industrial establishments in 1910 was $38,000,000. Hamilton makes everything from a paper bag to a threshing machine, from a blacuit to a boiler, from a bottle of "pop" to a railroad bridge. It is a city of diversified industries as the census facts show. Also it is an outstanding proof of the value of moderate protection.

Gallagher

The Boy Who Hunted
For Him Found
Him

By EDITH V. ROSS

"Is there a man around here by the name of Gallagher?" asked a pale faced boy who, judging from his appearance, might have been almost any age between fifteen and twenty-five.

"What do you want of Tim Gallagher, sonny?" asked the rough, red bearded man of whom the inquiry had been made.

"Oh, nothin' particular. I was just wonderin' if he was in this camp."

"Well, you give him a wide berth, and don't go round makin' inquiries for him; he might hear about it and want to know if you had any particular business with him. If you couldn't satisfy him he might reckon you was a spy on him for some one as was tryin' to get a drop on him."

"Mebbe," said the youth listlessly, moving on with a heavy step that indicated either bodily or mental indolence. He wore a baggy suit of clothes and a felt hat that he kept drawn down over his eyes. Nevertheless, lower at his coat was, as he walked away his adviser saw something evident on each hip that suggested the outline of a revolver.

The youngster lounged about the camp, occasionally asking some one if he'd seen Tim Gallagher. His inquiries were usually received with a surprised stare by the person inquired of, who in most cases walked away without a reply. The only person who answered the question was a woman, who said "There he goes now," and the boy without stopping to thank her moved away in the direction of the person he was looking for.

Nevertheless he didn't join Mr. Gallagher; he snatched along behind him

He felt assured that no woman not be openly attacked, for he was the quickest shot in the territory, and every man he had ever heard of him was afraid of him. But it occurred to him that this boy might have been sent by some enemy to spy upon his movements, and he decided to keep a close watch on him.

"Did you ever hear of me?" he asked.

"I've heard of a man named Gallagher and has had no end of fights around this part of the country, but you're not that Gallagher, are you?"

As the boy spoke in an ingenuous tone, he looked up at his companion in a mild way that brought confidence. The look of suffering in his face had disappeared, but was not replaced by any that could be definitely described. Gallagher looked into his mild eyes and saw nothing there but innocence or guile. When Gallagher's gaze was not bent upon him, however, the boy's expression changed. There was in it a cold, cruel, hard, heartless look.

"See here, sonny," said the man beside him. "I am that Gallagher, and I want you to understand that if you play any game with me I'll chaw you up as I would a worm."

The youth looked up at the desperado with an affected surprise that might have deceived a timid observer.

"Good Lord, you don't mean it!"

"Yes, I do mean it. I'm Gallagher, the man that there's a reward offered for. A reward! The only reward any one will get for takin' me is a bullet."

"Are you the man that killed Cy Allen?"

"Yes."

"And Hurt Holmes?"

"Yes, I shot him down of 'em. But how did you hear of these fights?"

"Oh, everybody round here has heard of 'em. You better look out for your neck, sonny. The only reward any one will get for takin' me is a bullet."

"The boy shut himself up suddenly. 'Well, what have you heard?' I suppose I oughtn't to tell."

"You will tell," and the man held a cocked revolver near the lad's temple.

"She's got three men on your track. They're goin' to surprise you, comin' on to you from different points."

"Why, go on; tell all you know."

"I don't know any more—I swear I don't."

"Yes, you do. And Gallagher here the boy a cuff. He was about to repeat it when he was cut off by the cry: "Don't! I'll tell!"

"Well, tell, then."

"They're watchin' you now. They know just where you are. They're goin' to shoot you from behind trees when you go through some bit of timber."

Gallagher looked at the boy suspiciously. It did not seem likely that he should know these things. The desperado didn't believe that there was a word of truth in what he said, but that he had been frightened into confessing a falsehood in fear of another cuff or something worse. But when a man has had warning of a plot against his life he is not likely to ignore it.

"How did you get wind of all this?" the boy's explanation was not at all satisfactory. He stammered through two or three stories, all disconnected, and at last broke down and confessed that he had heard only what he had first said that Mrs. Holmes had hired three men to come on him from different points and kill him. Gallagher, seeing that nothing was to be gained by browbeating, desisted, making up his mind that the boy was like any other boy and his story only worth attention so far as what he had stuck to was concerned.

But the story had its effect on him. He never entered a wood that he did not hold a cocked revolver in each hand and peer ahead of him, darting his eyes in every direction. Presently when they were approaching a sharp turn in the road the boy said:

"I reckon if I were you I'd get out and make this turn through those saplings."

"Why?"

"Well, it's a mighty good place for any one to make an ambush, not at all a hidden snare even in imagination is more apt to offend one than an open enemy in the flesh. Gallagher knew he was giving way without due cause, but he had been so reckless in his killings that he had begun to fear retaliation and was ready to see an enemy behind every bush. Pulling up and handing the reins to the boy, he alighted, telling him to drive on. He had walked a few yards in the rear of the wagon when he heard an ominous click behind him and a boyish voice say:

"I'm in luck," said the boy confidently. "I thought I would have to make this journey on foot."

"You don't look strong enough to do that." It's a good fourteen mile there and back."

"Your name's Gallagher, I reckon."

"What's that to you?"

"Oh, nothin' in particular."

"Where do you live?"

"Oh, I don't live especially any where."

Gallagher had killed so many persons whose relatives had sworn to have his life that he was very suspicious

"Do you know who I am?" asked the boy.

"No."

"I'm Bert Holmes—Bert Holmes' widow."

Gallagher had looked into eyes behind weapons before, but never had he seen death more surely depicted than now. The chances were against him, but he must take them. He had a chance to get off a shot. But his enemy was a second shot could be fired, or at least a third, he might raise his weapon and get in a shot. A wagon turning the bend in the road came suddenly upon a man lying dead there, a horse snubbing grass beside it and what was supposed to be a boy lying in a faint in the bottom of a wagon.

The murder of Bert Holmes was avenged.

"What? Why?"

Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud? As he rides in his swift flying car like a cloud. A break in the axle, a bust in the tire, the passes from life into the heavenly chime. "Chimed! Enquired."

Sounded Very Alarming. Simmons had returned from his vacation. "I certainly enjoyed the hunting," he said to a young woman. "Were you ever in the country during the season of hunting deer?"

"Hunting deer?" exclaimed the girl. "Why, of course not. How do you hunt a deer any more?"

An Inherited Taste. "What's the kid crying for?" asked the husband.

Hard Luck. Quisner—What's the matter, old man? You look worried. Stinner—Have cause to be. I hired a man to carry my portfolio. Quisner—Well, what's the trouble? Hain't he been successful? Stinner—Successful! I should say he has! I'm paying him bush money. Judge.

Misplacing Post Offices. The rural mail delivery system is fast replacing the country post office. With the past three months two hundred post offices were closed.

They are located mainly in Ontario. St. Edward Island has closed twenty-five post offices and established rural mail routes. Nova Scotia ten, New Brunswick twenty and Quebec fourteen. The Quebec rural deliveries are almost exclusively confined to the eastern townships.

The system is developing very slowly in the west owing to the scattered population.

TEACHERS CRITIQUE

Canadian Women in London Speak Their Minds.

The party of Canadian teachers who have been in England have been fastened upon by more than one reporter. English newspapers, of course, have printed anything which is not absolutely accurate. The interview quoted below, appeared in the London Evening News:

"The only difference I have noticed between English and Canadian teachers is that of the teachers, 'is that the voices of our children are so much more melodious than ours. And I think they are prettier, too."

"We are stronger on patriotism than you are in England. No school in Canada can receive the Government grant unless the Union Jack is hoisted over the building every morning."

Another teacher from Quebec had some pointed things to say about the "fapper."

"I guess some of your girls can't receive any education in taste," she said. "I saw something yesterday which fairly set my teeth on edge."

"She was about seventeen, and wore a brown hat with a red feather, a yellow sports jacket, a blue hobble skirt and the bottom of her shoes were nearly six inches high."

"And we came to London to see the fapper."

Another, who came from Saskatchewan, and who saw the suffragist riot in Whitehall, was very uncompromising.

"They're just mad," she said, "and I won't say any more. There's a thing you can say, though, and that is that we shall never have any military in Canada."

"It isn't because we should send them to jail or chop off their heads or anything of the sort. The point is that in Canada there are more men than women."

"In England it's the other way about, and the women haven't a chance to settle down to normal married life. In Canada all the women get married. Isn't it so Miss Alberta?"

And then, for some reason, she hastily added: "At least, that is, I mean all who want to."

Coppers in Calgary. Copper coinage has found a home in Calgary, and the coppers have come to stay, says the Albertan. That marks an epoch in our commercial life. They have been introduced from time to time, but not very successfully. The truth is that we despise coppers because we have so many small economies. We preferred to pay the extra four cents rather than carry a piece of brown metal about with us.

We were extravagant and took a pride in it. That was not a healthy state of affairs. We thought in real estate subdivisions and were wasteful in many ways somewhat. We are learning that to economize is not to make ourselves happier, but to get with the sort of happiness of common sense.

For instance, our householders are learning that they have money by patronizing the Calgary market, and are beginning to take some interest in economy, both small and large.

If They Had Known. That the old French voyageurs and missionaries knew of the existence of the Wright mine, old sage above, has been proved. If they had extended their researches for minerals beyond the waterways and the Indian trails, the silver mines at Cobalt with a difference it would have made to the present day. The French voyageurs, however, were not the discoverers of Cobalt a century and a half ago was quite within the realms of possibility. There was an old Indian trail with a few feet of lead, now Cobalt Lake, and where the Indian was mining for lead, too, the French voyager could and did follow him.

There would have been no difficulty in mining for lead. It was right on the surface and taken down in boats to Quebec. Then would the world have been astounded with the gleam of a silver Eldorado in the heart of Canada. The French king would have taken more pains to conserve the country which his predecessor had valued as so many aspects of snow and the destiny of the Dominion might have fallen along quite other lines. For the gallant Frenchmen, who first obtained judgment in Canada were poor in all but spirit and courage, and the riches of the silver mines of Canada would have rivalled in their eyes the mythical treasures of King Solomon—Cobalt Nugget.

Alberta's Big Hog Output. Some arrangements must be made immediately to care for the immense shipments of hogs which will soon begin to go on the market. The C.R.P. department estimates that more than half Alberta will have ready for market this year hogs to the almost unbelievable number of $500,000.

The railways have been exerting every effort to encourage mixed farming and the raising of hogs and live stock, and now fears that the farmers may be discouraged if there are not sufficient facilities for handling the product. So the city will try to hasten the building of an abattoir.

Vain Desires. I want to be elemental. To wear a crown like my own arch. Like the cave men of old. To have a wife and a child. And who me a bride with my arch. I want to be elemental. In primitive fashion to drink. But my barbarous wish. Just done in the life. Of a blasted experimental hotel.

A CANNY TRAVELLER

WILL CROOKS, M.P., REDDONS—FAKING TO A FINE ART.

British Labor Parliamentarian Who Toured Canada With Party of Legislators Carries a Chart Which Tells Him Just Where Everything is in His Loggia—Also Also a Book of Real Preserves.

Will Crooks, the British Labor M.P., who has been touring Canada, is essentially a home man. There is no place dearer to his rugged heart than his modest little home in London. He putters in and around day in and day out, and in the evening takes his ease at his hearthstone beside his wife.

When he left for his tour to Canada, Australia, and South Africa with the British Parliamentary party, which passed through the Dominion re-ently, he carried with him a heavy consignment of baggage. It was observed by one of the newspaper men in the party that Crooks was able to look just in what part of his luggage to look for any given object. There appeared to be some trick about it, and at last Crooks explained.

"See this little card here," he said, drawing off a diagram from his pocket, "well, that is a list of everything I have, laid out with marks showing in just a trench bag and which part of which bag the thing is. Cough! Yellow portmanteau, pocket No. 2, lower side. Slippers, bag No. 5, bottom. Clean hankies, black, and so on."

Then he pointed to one very heavy-looking grip.

"Guess you'll find it in it!" he said.

"Can't."

"Can't, y'! Well, it's preserves—'one making' a preserve."

"Preserves?"

"Aye—real preserves, none o' your factory-made jam."

And it was so. When the bell boy came to remove the baggage he did not carry the preserves. Will Crooks had it, and walked crossly, too.

The Fear of Drake. A writer in the London Chronicle says: "No public monument is needed to keep alive among Mexicans the memory of Sir Francis Drake's exploits in the Americas. The American Travelling in Mexico in 1904, Mr. Edward Stiles records that he 'heard a woman calling a tempestuous child by saying, 'Alvise Drake!' (Here 'Alvise Drake' is a name which will get you) or 'The Black Douglas shall get you!' Fancy people still living in terror of the exploits of the topsails on the horizon."

As to Mr. Churchill's reference to Sir Francis Drake as the first "introducer of the potato," it may be recalled that, on the market place of Offenbach, a little tower in the Grand Duchy of Baden, standing in the centre of a great potato-growing district, there was erected in 1853 a very handsome statue to Drake as "the introducer of the potato into Europe, A.D. 1586." But it is just possible that this statue was set up to C. wrong man, seeing that, according to Chambers, the Spaniards had introduced the tuber from near Quito at the beginning of the sixteenth century, and that Sir John Hawkins also brought it to England from Virginia in 1563—23 years before the importation ascribed to Drake.

Muffled Knocks. "Your wife is a splendid and a highly sensible woman. How in the world did you manage to win her?"

"That speech of yours last night, old chap, filled me with enthusiasm. We should have married it for you."

"Whenever I look at you, Mibbs, I can't help wondering what there is about you that makes me have a sort of liking for you."

"I don't believe you ever got drunk in your life, friend Swigman. If you ever did, though, it was at somebody else's expense."

"Come in, old boy. We were just talking about you, and I'm mighty glad you didn't hear what we were saying." —Chicago Tribune.

Mistress and Maid. "May I borrow a volume of Emerson from the library?" asked the housemaid.

"I have no objection," answered her mistress. "While you are about it bring me 'Lady Jacob's Divorce.'" —Boston Advertiser.

Had Her Own Way
It was a sunny day, and the florist's window, full of daisy-decked flowers, looked unusually seductive.

Soon there entered a lady of attractive appearance, but with a certain firmness of expression, indicative of a disposition to have her own way. She selected a brilliant-looking plant, in a Japanese flower-pot, and having ascertained the price, and announced that she would take it, inquired if it would do well in the sun. Certainly, miss, said the florist's assistant.

Don't say it will if it won't, she remarked sharply. Now, if it grows well in the sun, will the shade hurt it?

Not in the least, mum, responded the assistant.
Ah, she said, with a tightening of the lips, here is a plant that is declared to do equally well in shade or sun, which to say the least, is neither natural nor probable.
Precisely, madam. You see, it's an artificial plant.

And then the lady, having paid for her purchase, went out, with a flushed face, and shut the door with a slam that nearly broke the glass panes.

NERVOUS CHILDREN

ARE OFTEN IN THE EARLY STAGES OF ST. VITUS DANCE

They Need a Tonic to Strengthen the Weak Nerves and Restore Them to Natural Health

Many a child has been called awkward, has been punished in school for not keeping still, or for dropping things, when the child is not really at fault, as the trouble is really St. Vitus dance in its earlier stages. So common is this nervous disease in childhood that in some schools one-fifth of all the pupils have been found suffering from it in one form or another. Before the presence of the disease is betrayed there is usually a disturbance of the general health. The child shows listlessness and inattention. There is a general tremor, and a twitching of the muscles and jerking of the limbs and foot follow. A remedy that cures St. Vitus dance must cure it so thoroughly that no trace of the disease remains. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which make the nervous system necessary to feed the starving nerves and gives them the nourishment they demand.

Mrs. Hiram Barnhart, Scotch Junction, Ont., says: "About two years ago my oldest daughter, who was then seven years of age, was stricken with St. Vitus dance. She could not keep still for half a minute, no matter how hard she tried. Her limbs would jerk and twitch and every little thing would start her crying. I saw until almost a bottle of medicine said to be good for the nerves, but instead of helping her she was steadily growing worse. Her voice would change so that we could hardly understand her, and her face was ghastly and unlovely. I also did not look like the same child. I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills myself and was finally decided to give her these. When she had taken two boxes I could notice an improvement in the time she had used five boxes she was fully cured. However, I was determined to make the cure permanent. I sent her, and I gave her two boxes more, and I can truly say that she has never had a symptom of the trouble since, and is now as bright and active as any child of her age. I heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all mothers as the result of what they have done for my child and myself."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cent a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A tourist returning from an extended trip was about to cross the last trolley on the way to the railroad station for home.

Say, cap'n, he said, as he stepped into the trolley, this is a pretty old boat seems very shaky; was anybody ever lost in her?

Not to my knowledge, replied the boatman. There was three men drowned from her last Thursday, but we found them all next high tide the day after.

Nes' on a Sheep's Back
A well authenticated story of a stargazing nest on a sheep's back comes from Buckland Brewer, near Eiderford, on the authority of a Cardiff gentleman, who has just returned from the sheep pens.

During sheep shearing operations on Gourswood farm, which is in the occupation of a Mr. Cox, one of the sheavers cut in half a young starting which was in a nest that had been built in the sheep's wool. The bird, which contained two other fledglings still alive, was composed of moss and twigs. For some weeks previous to the shearing the sheep, with others, had had the run of three fields near the farm.

Heard Enough
Young Giles, eager to join the Metropolitan Police Force, journeyed to London to pass the necessary medical examination. This he survived satisfactorily, and the next day the proud recruit was interviewed by a high official.
Well, my man, said the latter you look like a promising sort of fellow. What kind of education have you had? Oh, sir, said the recruit, I was educated at a country school.
Ah, and you have a good general knowledge, I hope.
Oh, yes, sir.
I wonder—can you tell me, for example, how many miles it is from London to Edinburgh?
At this the recruit became nervously agitated and at length he blurted out:
Look, here, sir, if you're going to put me on that beat, I'm done with the force.

A Hard One
Father!
Well, what is it?
It says here a man is known by the company he keeps. Is that so, father?
Yes, yes, yes.
That's what I thought. I've got a good man keeps company with a bad man, is the good man bad because he keeps company with the bad man, or is the bad man good because he keeps company with the good man?

Arriving

Sleep is the great nourisher of infancy, and without peaceful sleep the child will not thrive. This cannot be got if the infant be troubled with worms. Murr's Worm Expeller destroys worms and drives them from the system, and afterwards the child's will be undisturbed. The powder cannot injure the most delicate baby, and there is nothing so effective for restoring the health of a worm-eaten infant.

The Best Treatment for Itching Scals, Dandruff and Falling Hair
To stop itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove cruds, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On washing, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get Cuticura ointment into every scalp skin rather than on the hair. The next morning, shampoo with Cuticura scrub and hot water. Shampoo alone may be used as often as agreeable, but once or twice a month is usually sufficient for this special treatment for women's hair. Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. A liberal sample of each, with 28-page booklet on the care and treatment of the skin and scalp, sent post free. Address "Cuticura," Dept. 223, Boston, U. S. A.

The Waterways Act
Government and Opposition near
Deadlock over it.

The government and the opposition almost reached a deadlock on Tuesday on the Waterways settlement bill, and early in the evening each side asserted that it would not surrender. The members of the opposition claim that they are entitled to more information on the measure before the house and the government reply that the fullest information has already been given. At ten o'clock in the legislature there was talk of an all night sitting, the government being determined, if possible, to get the measure through without further delay.

Shortly after eleven, however, an adjournment was agreed to. The house resumed committee of the whole on the bill on Tuesday afternoon and the first clause under discussion before the adjournment was again taken up. In committee of the whole each member has the opportunity of talking as often as he wishes and the opposition is taking full advantage of their privileges.

The arguments were turned largely on the question of government ownership of railways and opposition speakers led by Tweedie and Ewing have submitted voluminous reasons in favour of such.

MacKay and Mitchell have replied contending that government operation is impractical until railways throughout the entire dominion are under government control. MacKay has also taken the ground that by virtue of the privy council decision it would be impossible for the government to take the A. & G. W. money and construct the railway itself.

CATTLE AND HOGS
NEEDED FOR MARKET

Scarcity and High Price of Meat: Point to Profitable Opening For Our Farmers

In the high price of meats and the scarcity of cattle, sheep and hogs the Canadian farmer has a strong incentive to go in for livestock where he has not done so before, and to go in on a larger scale where he already has made a beginning. The population is growing far faster than the meat supply both in Canada and the United States and the new American tariff will, it now appears, admit Canadian cattle to the States free of duty. It would look as though the Canadian farmer has a profitable source of pretty high profits right at hand.

That extensive sections of the West appreciate the situation is indicated by the statement that one man has brought 8,000 young steers from Mexico. It is said that Alberta alone will have 500,000 hogs ready for market this year and that the Lethbridge district will yield 1,000,000 pounds of wool. There is plenty of room for progress along this line.

Six or seven years ago Canada and the United States were both considerable suppliers of cattle and meat to European countries, particularly Britain. In 1905 Canada exported to Britain 148,718 live animals, and the United States 414,906. In 1913 Canada exported to Britain 6,900 cattle, and

Packing Plants

Writing from Moose Jaw to his paper, Mr. Norman Lambert, Western representative of the Toronto Globe, says:

"Already plans are being made by public and private interests for the accommodation of the increased volume of mixed farming products which will be marketed in this Province in future. The Gordon-Ironside-Pares Co. have arranged to build a large packing plant at Moose Jaw, and Hon. Mr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture for Saskatchewan, is now talking of the establishment of a packing plant and abattoir on a co-operative basis, similar to that of the elevator and creamery companies in Saskatchewan.
